Health Policy Institute of Ohio

Tuesday, April 28, 2-3:00 p.m.

Description: During this session, participants will be introduced to the topic of adverse childhood experiences (ACEs), their health and economic impacts in Ohio, and the frequency at which Ohioans are exposed to them. Next, the presenter will describe protective factors (at the community, interpersonal, and individual levels) and their role in preventing ACEs and mitigating the negative effects of ACEs, with a special emphasis on trauma-informed care and behavioral health treatment. Policy opportunities to enhance protective factors will be shared throughout, and the session will conclude with strategies that participants can use to advocate for the policy changes recommended throughout the session.

Objectives:

- (2) Understand that ACEs can be prevented or their negative impacts mitigate with protective factors at the community, interpersonal and individual levels
- (3) Be familiar with policy opportunities to enhance protective factors among Ohioans and strategies for how to advocate for these policy changes
